THE following is the PROSPECTUS of the COMPANY, published in London:—

The recent discoveries of gold in Australia, and the extraordinary mineral wealth of that country, have been so fully brought before the public, that it is not considered necessary to enlarge on them in this prospectus; and private advice have so entirely confirmed the public accounts, that it is obvious large profits are to be derived from a properly organised undertaking to develope the resources of the Australian colonies.

Several of the principal merchants and gentlemen connected with Australia have therefore determined to form a company for the purpose of conducting mining, and such other operations as may be deemed necessary for the discovery and production of the precious metals, and with these views to lease, purchase, or otherwise arrange for the occupation of such lands as may be considered desirable.

Arrangements are being made with a gentleman of long experience in the gold mines of Brazil, to proceed to Sydney with all possible despatch, together with such assistants as may be deemed requisite.

A deed of settlement will be prepared forthwith for execution by the parties to whom shares may be allotted, and the necessary steps taken to obtain complete registration of the company as soon as possible, when a call not exceeding two pounds per share will be made to provide the necessary funds for the immediate purposes of the undertaking, and at least three months notice will be given before any further call is made.

It is intended to apply for a Charter of Incorporation.

Applications for Shares in the form given below may be made to the Solicitors.

For the portion of the Capital Stock reserved for distribution in the colony, viz., 2000 shares, application in the form below, may be made within one month from this date, addressed to C. E. ROBINSON, Secretary to the Local Board, at the Company's Offices, Charlotte-place.

These medicines have now established themselves in New South Wales, by means of the numerous wonderful cures which they have effected, when all the "regular" means have failed. The published cases are not as one to a thousand of the total amount of good done. The following is a statement from a most respectable hotel-keeper in Geelong, known to most travellers in that quarter:—

"My recent cure, of an ulcerated leg, by means of Holloway's Pills and Ointment, induces me to present my case before the public, in the hope that many others who are afflicted in the same way that I have been, and who do not believe in the efficacy of Holloway's Medicines, may derive equal benefit from the use of them. I had been afflicted for about three years with an ulcerated leg, and had the best medical treatment in Van Diemen's Land and Melbourne, without experiencing any relief, when a short time ago, hearing of the wonderful cures effected by the use of Holloway's Pills and Ointment, I resolved upon trying them. I purchased a few boxes of Holloway's Pills and Ointment, in Mr. Cregin's shop, in Collins-street, Melbourne; and with gratitude I acknowledge that after using them, and attending to the directions, I found my leg effectually cured. Being well-known in Melbourne and Geelong, I publish this statement, convinced that by doing so I only perform a duty that I owe to the community at large.

"Sworn to no Master, of no Sect am I."

THE TARIFF BILL IS SAFE.

Two attempts have now been made to defeat the new Tariff Bill by a side-wind, first by the motion of the honorable and learned member for Sydney for limiting the duration of the measure to two years, and next by that of the honorable member for Cook and Westmoreland for prohibiting by heavy penalties the practice of deducting from the Customs' revenue the costs of its collection. Happily, both attempts have signally failed. The object ostensibly aimed at in the latter motion is one as to the reasonableness and propriety of which we do, indeed, entirely concur with the honorable mover. We could never understand why the Customs, any more than other departments, should be allowed to pay itself out of the sums collected by its officers; in other words, why it should not have been required to hand over to the Treasury the gross instead of the net proceeds. Still more perplexed have we been to understand how the existing practice can have been tolerated, and tolerated for twenty years, under a reformed Parliament,—especially how it can have been tolerated subsequently to its condemnation by a vote of the House of Commons. In his despatch on the Protest of the Legislative Council, the late Colonial Minister, referring to this subject, has nothing to say in defence of the practice, but that it exists, and has existed since olden times, in the mother country. In our judgment this is no defence at all; and we hope the time is not distant when both at home and in this colony every farthing of the public revenues will be paid into the exchequer, and not one farthing appropriated otherwise than by Legislative authority.

But while we so far agree with the professed intention of the mover, we rejoice that his motion was rejected. To say the least, the motion was out of place. The Bill before the Council had in view one exclusive object—that of providing ways and means for producing a public income. The motion related to another subject altogether—that of disbursement. As well might a clause have been proposed for regulating the mode of keeping and rendering the accounts, and another for regulating the mode in which the accounts should be audited. The principle involved in the motion was, moreover, by far too important, and beset with too many difficulties arising out of imperial law and royal instructions, to be disposed of in so summary and parenthetical a manner. If the honorable member was really in earnest in wishing to carry his point for its own sake, and not as an indirect means of carrying another and irrelevant point, it is still competent for him to bring in a Bill for the purpose, or, which would perhaps be a still more judicious course, to move for a Select Committee to take the whole subject into mature consideration, with the view of applying to the revenues of New South Wales the principle affirmed by a majority of the House of Commons, on the motion of Dr. Bowring, as applicable to those of the United Kingdom.

We fear, however, we cannot give the honorable member for Cook and Westmoreland the credit of having been actuated in this matter by straightforward motives. Knowing as we do how hostile he is to the doctrine of free trade, and how strenuously he has laboured to defeat the Customs Bill, simply because that doctrine is the basis upon which its provisions rest, it is impossible to doubt that his real object was to throw the apple of discord amongst its supporters, and thereby get the measure so modified as to secure its rejection by the Government. This jesuitical craft is unworthy of any legislator wishing to acquire a character for public spirit and generous aims. It is unworthy of any assembly in which free discussion is the accredited means of eliciting truth, and arriving at sound conclusions for the public good. If an honorable member is opposed to a measure, let his opposition be expressed boldy and explicitly; let him meet his antagonists face to face, and with weapons openly displayed, taking and giving a fair field and no favour. But let him not skulk beneath a mask; let him not tread stealthily like an assassin, hiding his dagger in his bosom, and striking his blows only when he hopes his adversaries have been put off their guard.

We congratulate our fellow-colonists that neither open nor covert opposition has been permitted either to defeat, or to mutilate, or to postpone, this noble Bill. It is now safe, and will, we have no doubt, be a real blessing to the colony, and a monument of lasting praise to the Colonial Legislature.

STOPPING THE SUPPLIES.

The first Order of the Day for this evening is the "Call of the House," when it is understood Mr. Wentworth will try his strength on the question for stopping the supplies. We had hoped, for the reasons already stated, that calmer consideration would induce the honorable and learned member to withdraw his motion. But we are disappointed. His Notice still stands on the paper, and we gather from his observations on Wednesday evening that he is fully bent on stopping the supplies, "and no mistake." His avowed object in supporting Mr. Martin's motion was to make that stoppage the more complete and embarrassing. He is reported to have said that "he would candidly state to the House that when he talked of stopping the supplies, he meant the actual stoppage of them; and he should be glad to adopt any measure which would put the Government in further difficulty and strait upon the stoppage of the supplies."

Now, it is all very fine to talk about hampering the Government, but what is to become of the community? Let Mr. Wentworth's wishes be carried out to the letter, and the colony is ruined. He proposes, literally and truly, to deprive the Government of all means of protecting our property and our lives. He would force them, as observed by the Colonial Secretary, to disband the police, and shut up the Post Office, and create all the inconvenience and disorder possible.

Are honorable members prepared thus to trifle with the public safety? Are the colonists prepared to be thus trifled with? Can any cool-headed man say that such a crisis has come upon us as demands our submission to this social martyrdom? Not until the last resort shall have been actually forced upon us—not until the British Parliament shall have finally rejected our claims, and sealed our political doom beyond hope—can we be justified in thus putting ourselves to the torture, or can our representatives be justified in calling upon us to do so.

VICTORIA.

(From our Special Correspondent.)

Melbourne, July 16.—Six mail days have now passed without our receiving any mail bag from Sydney. As it must necessarily be some week or ten days hence that the Conside, not yet arrived here, will leave for Sydney, I have thought it expedient to write you the news of the past week, and to entrust it to the tender mercies of the overland route, hoping that it may chance to escape the perils of flood and field, and reach you peradventure about the same time as the mail per Conside or Shamrock. As to the cause of the present detention of the mails, lamentable as it is, I still contend that a really paternal Government is bound to make provision against an emergency of this sort, by the construction of really useful roads and bridges,—useful, not in fine weather alone, but in seasons of wet and flood.

The Melbourne Herald is coming out in a new and I must say in a most creditable character, having broken the bonds that tied them to the Government, and now peppering away at them right and left in a style that shows that there is some "new hand at the bellows." There is a vigour and freshness too about the leaders that have wonderfully raised the Herald in public opinion within the last week or two, and which promises to make this journal as staunch a reformer as its rival the Argus. In fact, a newspaper, in my humble opinion, must follow and not attempt to lead public opinion, must be the exponent and not set up for the director of the popular wishes. The Herald has doubtless discovered this, and having found the way of truth, is very wisely following the track.

Last Wednesday's Government Gazette publishes the Quarterly Abstract of the Revenue for the second quarter of 1852, and shows the astounding increase of £63,000 in the general, and £99,000 in the territorial revenue, as compared with the corresponding quarter of the previous year. The total amount received during the quarter was for general revenue £98,456 11s. 11d.; and for territorial £186,579 16s. 3d. In duties of spirits there has been an increase (in round numbers) of £25,000; on tobacco of £9000; and on ad valorem duties of £15,000. The revenue of the gold fields for the quarter was, for licenses and escort fees £81,456 2s., to which is to be added about £40,000 received, but not yet handed in. I leave you to draw your own inferences, and make your own comments upon these facts, lest, in indulging myself in any remarks I may be led into any of those boastings for which the scribblers of Victoria have earned so much celebrity.

Highway robberies are still rife, and scarcely a day passes without some offence of this nature being reported to the police. Our police take an occasional gallop into the bush, but are of coure very careful not to fall in with the marauders. However, to prevent any popular outcry on the subject some poor devil, who no doubt deserves punishment for some other offence, is occasionally picked up in Melbourne, and his apprehension duly recorded in large capitals in the newspapers—Another Bushranger taken. These unfortunates are remanded from day to day, until their name and offence are both forgotten by the public, and are then discharged; so that our good people of Melbourne are perfectly satisfied that the most active and energetic proceedings are being taken.

Talking of the highway robbers naturally enough reminds me of the gentlemen emigrants from Van Diemen's Land, for whose especial service Mr. Westgarth has introduced into the Legislative Council a Bill "to prevent the introduction into the colony of Victoria of convicted felons and other persons sentenced to transportation for offences against the laws." I don't imagine that this Bill will be carried through the House, but even if it is, it is sure not to receive the assent of the Lieutenant-Governor. The first clause provides a punishment of three years in irons for any convicted felon, or any person not at liberty to reside in any part of the United Kingdom, found landing in the colony of Victoria, on conviction before any two justices. The second clause allows no person to land without first showing to the satisfaction of an officer to be appointed that he is entitled to full and entire liberty. The third clause imposes a penalty on captains bringing over these men, to be recovered by distress and sale of the vessel. Four other clauses relate to mere technical matters. There is no doubt that very much may be said against this Bill, and that the Government will have plenty of good arguments about the liberty of the subject, &c., to oppose it with; but, as Mr. Westgarth observed on introducing it, on Friday last, "strong evils require strong remedies," and some such measure forced up to the point of the Governor's veto, would show the people at home that we are really not joking in the matter.

One of the most degrading exhibitions I have ever beheld, was shown in the Legislative Council Chamber on Friday evening last. Mr. Fawkner proposed the appointment of a Select Committee to enquire into and report upon the alterations necessary to be made in the Constitution of the colony. The honorable member hardly spoke a couple of dozen words for the motion, and no member made any observation upon it, and when the question was put, on a division, it was lost on a majority of 15 to 8, Mr. Russell, a nominee, voting for the motion, and Messrs. Murphy, Rutledge, Miller, Mercer, Snodgrass, Goldsmith, Turnbull, Campbell, and Splatt, representatives, voting against it. It may be asked whether these gentlemen in thus voting against the motion are to be considered as perfectly approving of our existing Constitution, which they deem so excellent and finished as to be incapable of improvement; or whether they are to be charmed with the duties of legislation, and so attached to the dignity of M.L.C. that follow their names, that they are unwilling to propose any alteration that may in any way interfere with the protraction of their tenure of office to its fullest term. To this no satisfactory answer can be given. No reason was assigned for the opposition, as if it had it might have been inconveniently sifted and winnowed by public discussion, and then the large amount of chaff would have been shown to be totally disproportioned to the few grains hidden in its midst. Our legislators have the colony entirely in their hands, provided they don't talk too much, and thus bring the newspapers down upon them. Just at present—gold—gold—is the all pervading, the only interesting theme, and politics, like physic, are thrown to the dogs, so that our colonists are to be roused by nothing unless money is to be made out of it.

On Tuesday, Mr. Westgarth's Resolutions on the subject of Transportation were fully debated before the House. I have already sent you a copy of these, and you will perceive that the 5th Resolution pitches a little bit into Earl Grey. Of course this was objected to on the Government side of the House, though one Government official, the Chairman of Quarter Sessions, Mr. Pohlman, whose name I would wish to see in letters of gold, boldly stood forth to support this resolution, as he felt convinced that Earl Grey's conduct was certainly calculated to create disaffection in the colonies. The amendment for expunging this resolution was lost by a majority of 19 to 5; its only supporters being the four Government officials, the Attorney-General, Solicitor-General, Colonial Secretary, and Auditor-General, and Mr. Wilkinson. A second amendment, for expunging the 7th resolution, which gives the opinion of the Council on Sir William Denison's conduct in the matter, was then moved by Mr. Russell, but it found only three supporters, the Auditor-General, Mr. Russell, and again Mr. Wilkinson. The resolutions were then carried nem. con. The extraordinary votes given by Mr. Wilkinson on this question, have led to some vague surmises as to that gentleman's opinion on the subject of transportation, and the Argus boldly hints the possibility that there may still be some remnants of convictism in his composition.

A question asked by Mr. Westgarth, on the same day, showed, by the reply of the Auditor-General, that our wiseacre Government have been remitting money home to England, without taking advantage of the rate of exchange in favour of this colony. In fact they have been remitting at par, whilst the exchange was at 10 per cent. premium. When this matter was made public in the House, several members jumped up to say a word or two on it; but the Speaker interfered with his "out of order," and happily saved the Government from a very severe dressing. The matter, however, is not likely to be allowed to drop here.

The only matter of consequence that came before the House on Wednesday, was the discussion that ensued relative to the appointment of a Select Committee to enquire into the expediency of reviving District Councils. After all the discussion that has years ago been lavished on those institutions, and the almost general odium they incurred, I think I am right in saying that our Legislators can do as they like with us, and that they are taking advantage of the golden dreams of the people to moot a question which, in ordinary times, would have been received with a yell of execration. However, as it was but the appointment of a Committee that was carried, we may well wait the report of that Committee before indulging in any remark; though, from the tone of the House, I much fear an attempt to re-establish these obnoxious bodies; whilst I believe that every member of the Committee is favourable to them.

Since my last, we have had many changes in our Legislative Council. Colonel Anderson has taken the place of Mr. Dunlop, deceased, and Mr. T. A'Beckett succeds Mr. Ross, who has resigned. Mr. Haines has also resigned, but as yet his successor has not been named. The Sergeant-at-Arms, Major Singleton, became disgusted with his office, and the beggarly £100 a-year attached to it (a less salary, by the by, than that given to the messengers, who receive £2 2s. per week), and resigned; and it is said that Mr. Colin Campbell will succeed him, though of this there is some doubt, as it was rumoured at the Club on Wednesday that the situation had been offered to both Mr. Campbell and Mr. Childers, who had successively declined it.

From what fell from the Government side of the House a night or two ago, it may also be presumed that that expensive and useless corps, the Native Police, will be abolished. The only public acts that this body have done, have been the unsuccessful hunting for the white woman about whom there was such a row some years back, and the murder of some scores of blacks in Gipps Land. Whether these are to be classed as either creditable or useful, need hardly be asked?

I have sent you a copy of the Customs Duties Bill, recently introduced by message, and which is to be read a second time on the 12th August.

Mr. Miller, a gentleman but little known, but said to be of considerable classical attainments, has been appointed Inspector of Schools under the National Board of Education.

CONTRIBUTIONS FROM HOME.

(No. LXXIX.)

London, March 8, 1852.

How to make the least possible work appear to the greatest possible advantage, has always been the characteristic of Lord John Russell in office. His New Reform Bill was merely a plan for covering the shame of close boroughs, reviving the defunct rotten boroughs, and preserving or diffusing the great county influences, in the old county fashion. The Bill was hooted down, and there is an end of it. Happily there is an end also of the Whig Ministry.

Have we, then, bettered ourselves by the advent of the Tories? Yes, it is a step onwards, whilst the Whigs were simply stationary. It is now to be seen whether Lord Derby and his colleagues can re-impose Protection in the face of the palpable good that Free Trade has wrought throughout the land. He admits that with the present Parliament he cannot do so. He calculates on a majority at the coming general election. "The Times," cries "give him a trial, he does not mean what he says." Mr. Christopher, and other colleagues of Lord Derby, assert that "he does mean what he says." The Manchester-men believe the latter to be the best interpreters of their own intentions, and consequently the Anti-Corn Law League is again up and doing. Mr. Cobden has sounded the tocsin at Manchester and Leeds. He has delivered two speeches, which have caused the Free Traders throughout the country "to close their ranks." —twenty-seven thousand pounds were subscribed at Manchester in less than as many minutes, forty thousand pounds are collected altogether, and already the Protectionists are as good as defeated. Even with the present imperfect representation, and in the face of all the close boroughs, and influenced counties, the Protectionists being in a minority in Parliament, must either abandon Protection or go out. And what then? Will Lord John Russell and the rest of the "Happy Family" come in again? Possibly. But certainly not quite so happy, nor quite so select as before. The middle classes have now attained to such power in the House of Commons, that Government by aristocratic cliques, as in the olden time, is no longer practicable. The going out of the Whigs last year, the abortive attempt of Lord Derby to form an administration, the consequent Ministerial crisis, and the coming back of the Russell Ministry to drag on another year of suspended animation, were the death throes of either party striving to retain the old monopoly of power in the old faction's hands. As Cobbett used to say, howsoever Whigs and Tories might be opposed to each other, they were ever ready to unite for the purpose of excluding the people from any participation in the Government of the country. The two aristocratic factions, however, must now either sink their differences, and coalesce, which they can only do by becoming more democratic, or they must alternately outbid each other for popular favour; or take short turns of power on the sufferance of adversaries, as the Whigs have done in the past twelve months; or the Whigs themselves must "widen their basis," by taking in a portion of the Manchester party, and resolutely proceed to satisfy the demands of the country. All these alternatives are unpleasant, and one of them ridiculous. And that one the Tories are making trial of at the present moment. We shall soon see with what amount of success, and how long to endure.

So far as your special interest in the present Government goes, it is evident you can hardly be worse off than you were before, under the shifty and equivocating rule of Lord Grey. It is true there seems to be something almost absurd in suddenly taking a country justice from Quarter Sessions, and saying to him, as Lord Derby says to Sir J. Pakington, "There; now be a Governor of forty colonies by inspiration, you have every requisite aid from the mild and gentlemanly philosophers of the Colonial Office, who study dependent governors' despatches alone, and never allow themselves to be misled by listening to the stories of returned colonists." By a miracle, and with the assistance of Mr. Wyld's great globe, Sir John Pakington may resolve on judging for himself, but he must be a wonderful John, if he can dash aside the crowds of gentlemen who are about him on every side with coils of red tape, ready to be cast over any irregular free movement on the part of the new Colonial Minister.

It is pleasant to turn from this unpleasant sight, and leaving that "Sleepy Hollow" of a place called Downing-street, to wander to that scene of real work, the London Docks. "For Sydney direct;" "for Melbourne direct;" "for Geelong and the Gold Regions, having quick despatch." These are a few of the pleasant notifications that present themselves, on every side. It is not at all impossible that with money here at one and-a-half per cent. interest, there will be a regular emigration furor this season. Many signs thereof may be detected by the observer. Mr. Prout's Gold Region Diorama is better attended than was his last one. A greater number of ladies and gentlemen visit the London Docks to look at the Australian shipping than could have been seen six weeks back. Greater interest in the geography of the antipodes is displayed by the well informed classes. A better sale for works on the Australian colonies, has set in this year. Captain Erskine's pamphlet on the gold discoveries reached a second edition in a few days. I bought a copy of the second thousand of Mr. Leslie Foster's little brochure the other day. Even the celebrated first advertisement of the third column of the Times, lately afforded some savour of the growing emigration. The "Dearest Edward," or Adolphus, who is always agonising his parents and sisters, by running away in that third column, and never returning, although "ALL would be forgiven," appears at last to have turned his attention to the subject of emigration. From the top of said column of the Times, of the 2nd of March, I copied the following:

"Edward.—You will be kindly received and forgiven, if you immediately return. (sic, in capitals.) It will be impossible to conceal your absence from friends and relatives, if you remain from home longer. You must see by this time, the folly of attempting to emigrate with so small a sum. Return or write."

I have been at the pains of extracting literally the above invocation to Edward, because on the very first reading, it struck me as extremely significant of the prevalence of a very common subject of anxiety to many families in this country. As Burke always anxiously consulted his acquaintance, the stupid lord, as an infallible foolometer, showing the general opinion of society on any particular subject, so that third column of the Times may be often referred to with great advantage for analogous purposes. How many inferences may be safely drawn from that perpetual advertisement of Edward? Analyse the above extract. Edward is obviously "out on the spree." He has evidently a free and indulgent Governor—for as yet only Edward's mother knows he's out. That mother however fears, or affects to fear, that Edward, continuing to haunt "the Coal-Hole, the Casinos, and the Judge and Jury Clubs," it will be impossible to conceal his absence from friends and relatives, if he remains from home longer." For "Friends and Relatives" read "the old Gentleman." How obviously that tender mother, and those affectionate sisters, are keeping the real state of things from "the Governor" as much as they can. They have heard from Edward, and he has evidently very nearly spree'd it to the bottom of his purse. In this anxious position as to "ways and means," he has one morning, whilst nursing his headache, called for the Times newspaper. There he has read of Mr. Wentworth's golden roads and bridges. Edward having so nearly played out his game here, and feeling uneasy on the subject of "the Governor," is open to an offer from any quarter. Fortune seems to beckon the fast youth towards those roads and bridges. What could not so accomplished a man about town effect on so inferior a stage as a colony? He writes to his mother and sisters announcing his intention. His destination is evidently the remote Frederick's Valley, or "the Turon," as there would be no "folly" in attempting to emigrate with so small a sum to Canada or any nearer colony. It is clear that despite the prudent cautions of Edward's most thoughtful advisers, he will be off by an early ship. What matters a low Exchequer? Has he not genius? Are there not Gold Companies wanting managers who "know a thing or two about town?" Nothing venture, nothing have. Why should he not pick up a hundred pound weight as well as another? He is already looking after his passage. Dropping his gentility for a brief interval, in compliance with "so small a sum," he must content himself with "intermediate" or "steerage." I am certain I saw him the other day looking over one of the vessels. He was ambitiously dressed; he smelt strongly of tobacco, and his linen might have been cleaner. His eyes were blood-shot, and his face rather soddened. He heard the mate and myself discussing things Australian; and with that easy confidence that distinguishes Edward everywhere, he lounged up to us and joined as a volunteer in the conversation. "He thought of having a run out himself," and his manner suggested to us that we ought to be duly impressed by his condescension towards the colony. I did not attempt to ripen the acquaintance, for he looked a likely person to enquire if we had "such a onthing as half-a-crown about us." I have doubt you will soon have "Edward" at the "diggings," and I have a strong impression, that his back will ache very much there. He may get a large lump, or he may not. If he do, he will vow its "capital fun." If he do not, he will probably return to London, and expose the whole thing "as a regular humbug." The colony will not be fit for a gentleman, and upon his, and his confiding mother's and sister's testimony, some respectable Earl of Shaftesbury will denounce the entire community, upon the most unexceptionable authority,—the authority of Edward, as the vilest spot on the face of the earth." To guard, then, against such a catastrophe, see that Mr. Hardy assigns to Edward one of the most auriferous portions, patches, or gulches the Turon can afford: for on Edward's success hangs the reputation of the colony.

"The Asiatic," which will carry this, takes out to Sydney many miners, and several gentlemen managers of mining companies. Although the scrip of most of these concerns has for some time past been somewhat heavy on the London market, they will unitedly operate to pump a considerable quantity of British sovereigns into your society. Whether golden dividends will respond, must depend upon more things than can be conveniently discussed at the end of a paper.

COUNCIL PAPERS.

THE WESTERN GOLD FIELDS.

Report from the Gold Commissioner for the Western Districts to the Chief Gold Commissioner, on the prospects of the Western Gold Fields.

Gold Commissioner's Office, Bathurst, July 8, 1852.

Sir,—I have the honour to submit to you my report upon the Gold Fields of my district, the remarks on which are gathered from personal observation during my late visit to each field; and I have much pleasure in stating that in spite of the inclemency of the weather, which has interfered much with the workings for the moment, the gold fields of this district never held out greater inducements to the enterprising gold digger than at present; and I have no hesitation in stating that we could now give profitable employment even to the masses congregated at Mount Alexander; and still less hesitation have I in affirming that with an equal population our mines would yield even a larger quantity than the Port Phillip diggings. The only gold fields in this district at present in a state of repose are the Turon and Ophir; at the former the population is thinning fast, not from having exhausted the precious deposits, but from the heavy and frequent floodings of the river, which have hitherto prevented the richest claims from being worked—I mean the bed of the stream, which must now remain unworked until the summer. The vast quantity of rain which has fallen lately, has so completely soaked the ground, that the chance of any sufficient decrease in the body of water now in the river, is but small. But this very cause, acting as a preventive to success at the Turon has enabled the miners to develope the richness of other places, and the table lands of the Dirt Hole and Tambaroura are consequently being worked with unexampled success. The top soil from the hills in this locality, to the depth of one foot only, yield as much as 3 to 4 ozs., per diem, and the flats in front of the Commissioner's tents are also proving highly remunerative, producing the same description of gold as the Dirt Hole (not elsewhere procurable at Tambaroura), which is rather a curious fact. The diggings about this part are extending in all directions, and it is hard to say where they will not find gold about this part of the country. On the Macquarie, about 4 miles below the junction of the Turon, they have opened rich diggings with from ten to fifteen feet of washing stuff. Such an unusual deposit will no doubt have the effect of concentrating a population on that river, and eventually develope its resources, and I think I may predict, lead to establishing the Macquarie as our largest, if not richest Gold Field. The large flats at Burrendong (on this river), all of which appear to have been formed by continued deposits from the higher ground, will, I have no doubt, on trial, prove sufficiently rich to yield a due return for labour. This, as the diggers are increasing about that part, will, I think, soon be proved. Little, however, can be done on the banks until the waters subside; although, at the place I mention, near the junction of the Turon, they are digging above the present water mark with profitable results.

At Louisa Creek, although the Great Nugget Vein Quartz Crushing Company are doing little, the alluvial washings prove highly remunerative. The diggers there number some 400 to 500. The flats, precisely similar to those at Tambaroura, have not as yet been tried, but will eventually afford employment to vast numbers. Indeed from what I have observed, I am led to believe that the whole of the table land, from the lower end of the Louisa Diggings to Campbell's, a distance of from eight to ten miles, will pay for working, and if my ideas prove correct, in that locality alone there is room for 40,000 diggers. I draw my conclusion from analogy, and although not always a safe way of reasoning, yet, perhaps with reference to gold fields, it is less liable to mislead than in most cases. The Meroo is unworkable or nearly so from the same cause as the Turon, but its numerous tributaries and rich dry diggings find employment for the population, and prevent that migration which is consequent upon the Turon floods, from the scarcity of dry diggings on that river as present discovered, and their uncertain yield. The Meroo itself must yet be considered as a known but unworked gold field, for its banks and bed claims will no doubt prove sufficiently rich.

Ophir is at present in a dormant state, from which I have little doubt it will some day be again aroused. The numerous quartz veins which abound in and about Ophir will surely some day find employment for capital, even should its alluvial diggings never again attract a population. To conclude my report, I think we have all cause for congratulation in the future prospects of the Western Gold Fields; confident I am that we require nothing but a large population to develope its riches, a stream of which, in the shape of return diggers from Port Phillip, has already begun to flow our way.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Your most obedient servant,
CHAS. H. GREEN,
Gold Commissioner for the Western Districts.
To the Chief Gold Commissioner.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

SUPREME COURT.—Thursday.

Banco Sittings.

Before the full Court.

STUART v. M'EVOY.

Mr. Darvall, for defendant, moved upon notice, to postpone the trial of this cause, which was set down for the next Circuit Court at Goulburn. The action was for £12 only, the value of a horse; the true question being whether the horse had or had not been stolen. Defendant, it was sworn, was absent in Port Phillip, as was also a material witness.

The Attorney-General opposed this motion, because of the expense and delay which it would entail, and because it was not shown distinctly that the facts to be spoken to by this witness were material to the issue. The defendant had pleaded to the general issue only, and the question as to whether or not the horse had been stolen.

The Court granted the postponement upon two conditions:—1st, That £12 should be paid into Court on or before Thursday next; 2nd, that the costs of, and occasioned by, this postponement, be paid within seven days after taxation and demand.

CUMMINGS v. SCHOFIELD.

Mr. Darvall moved that the above case be tried by a common jury of twelve. The action was for trespass, and there were pleas of the general issue, and not possessed.

Mr. Broadhurst opposed the motion upon the ground that the question was a simple one.

The Court held that unless good cause was shown why by granting a common jury the interests of the party opposing would suffer, such a jury must, according to previous decisions, be granted as a matter of course. The present motion was therefore acceded to. The costs of the motion to be costs in the cause.

Court adjourned until ten o'clock this morning.

DOMESTIC INTELLIGENCE.

INSOLVENT COURT.

Thursday.

Before S. F. Milford, Esq., Chief Commissioner of Insolvent Estates.

In the estate of Daniel J. Tierney, a certificate meeting was held. Applicant was opposed on three grounds by Mr. Andrew Dunn, a creditor, in respect to which he was examined at some length, and the meeting adjourned until noon of Monday next.

MEETING THIS DAY.

In the estate of Alexander Waddell, an adjourned second meeting, at 11 o'clock.

MEETING TO-MORROW.

In the estate of Charles Appleton, a special meeting, at half past 10 o'clock.

EXCURSION ON BOARD THE STEAMER YARRA YARRA.

The whole of the arrangements for placing this fine steam-ship on the berth between Sydney and Victoria having been completed, the Directors of the Australasian Steam Navigation Company invited a large party to accompany them in a trip down the harbour of Port Jackson; and, in pursuance of this invitation, about 306 ladies and gentlemen, including the families of the leading people in Sydney, embarked yesterday, at the Company's wharf. Among those present were the Colonial Secretary, with Mrs. E. Deas Thomson, and Miss Thomson. Sir Charles Nicholson, Speaker of the Legislative Council, and most of the leading members of the local legislature, with their families. The Solicitor-General; Colonel Bloomfield, and most of the officers of Her Majesty's Eleventh Regiment; and the officers of Lieutenant-General Wynyard's staff; Colonel Cumberland, of H.M. 96th Regiment, who is on a visit to the colony. Deputy-Commissary-General Ramsay; and the principals of the leading mercantile firms of Sydney, with their families.

At twelve o'clock precisely the Yarra Yarra was loosed from her moorings, the Band of H.M. 11th Regiment playing Rule Britannia. The day was remarkably fine, and every arrangement had been made to make this really a pleasure trip.

We may remind our readers, that this steamer arrived here on the 4th of April last, having been constructed for the A.S.N. Company by Messrs. Caird and Co., of Greenock, who built the hull; the machinery having been supplied by Messrs. Denny, Brothers. The chief cabin has excellent and luxurious accommodation for fifty passengers; but the fore cabin, not having been constructed on a sufficiently large scale to meet the increasing transit between Sydney and Melbourne, the Company at once determined to enlarge it, and it now is capable of receiving 170 passengers. This, in fact, is a great feature in the Yarra Yarra. Travellers are accustomed to find luxury preside aft in the superb steam-ships of modern days; but when they find such influences extending to the fore-cabin, where the comfort and convenience of the passengers are studied with the same scrupulous care as marks the arrangements for the cuddy, the inspection of such a vessel becomes doubly agreeable. Such, we must particularly observe, is what will be found in the three fine saloons appropriated for the steerage passengers of the Yarra Yarra. However, our province to-day is not to give a description of the vessel, but to recount the proceedings of the gay party who had assembled on her deck to do honour to her enterprising proprietors.

After steaming down the harbour, the trip being enlivened by the martial strains of the gallant Eleventh's band, the Yarra Yarra anchored in Rose Bay about half-past one o'clock. A sumptuous collation was then served up, the Chairman of the A. S. N. Company, Mr. Robert Campbell, M.L.C., presiding, supported on his right and left by the Colonial Secretary, Sir Charles Nicholson, and Colonel Cumberland, the Solicitor-General, and Colonel Bloomfield. The younger branches were entertained in the large saloon of the fore cabin, where the honours were performed by Mr. T. W. Smart, M.L.C., Captain Browne, and Messrs. Paterson and Terry, the Manager and Assistant Manager of the Company. To judge from the screams of laughter which every now and then reached the quarter-deck, and disturbed the gravity of honorable and learned speakers, it was quite evident that the juniors were in excellent hands; and we detected certain sly young gentlemen stealing away to the children's cabin, excusing themselves on the ground that it was "capital fun."

The collation finished, the Chairman rose to propose the health of her Majesty the Queen, the sovereign lady who rules us, and who lives in the hearts of her subjects in every part of her great empire. On occasions like the present it was most gratifying to propose this toast in the presence of so many fair and loyal subjects of Queen Victoria. (Loud cheers.) And he (Mr. Campbell) would say, that in no part of the great British confederation was loyalty more deeply imbued in the hearts of the people than in Australasia. The toast was drunk with enthusiasm, the band playing the National Anthem.

The Chairman then proposed the health of Prince Albert and the Royal Family, which was as warmly received, the band playing Prince Albert's March.

The next toast was his Excellency the Governor-General of Australasia. In proposing this toast, the Chairman said that, assembled as the present party had in honour of an important step in the progress of the colony's communications by steam, it was with much pleasure, that, in proposing the health of Sir Charles Fitz Roy, he had to advert to his Excellency's zeal and sustained earnestness in the cause of internal communication, by means of railroads in this colony. (Loud cheers.) Whether to the distant districts of the interior, or to the ports of the extensive Australian sea-board, the power of steam would now be rapidly applied; and most gratifying to the colonists was it ... that in the Governor-General they had ... cere supporter of this great instrument ... lization, and social improvement, and ... perity. Directors, it would have been a proof of sad incompetency on his part, if the operations of the Company had not been attended with success. To them and to those around him, he tendered his hearty thanks, and would add his earnest hope, that if he was spared to return to this colony, after completing the mission upon which he was about to embark for England, he should find his excellent friends in the full enjoyment of health, happiness, and prosperity. (Loud cheers.)

The tables were then cleared, and dancing was commenced with great spirit; the first polka being opened by Mr. Campbell and Miss Thomson. Quadrilles, waltzes, and polkas succeeded each other in lively succession, as the Yarra Yarra glided from Watson's Bay round the harbour; and when she arrived, at sunset, at the wharf, it was acknowledged by all that a more agreeable excursion had seldom been enjoyed on these waters.

Erratum.—The Tariff Bill.—An obvious typographical error crept into yesterday's report of the debate in committee on this Bill. In the second motion of the Colonial Secretary on the tobacco duties, in place of moving "that the duty on manufactured tobacco be 1s. per lb., until the 31st December, 1843, and thereafter 6d. per lb.;" it should have been "unmanufactured tobacco."

Insanity.—Ann Geering, apparently about seventeen years of age, was brought before the Police Magistrate yesterday, at the instance of her sister, as of unsound mind, and requiring to be placed under some restraint for her own security. The girl arrived in the colony in last March, and had been in a situation until about six weeks since, when she was sent home to her sister on account of her mental abberation; it had been found necessary to watch her day and night, in order to prevent her injuring herself; and on Wednesday morning she was found at the well-side, with the lid up, and when questioned as to her intent, she said she was going into the well to prevent herself from being shot. Finding that she grew worse instead of better, this step had been resorted to for her better protection. In default of sureties she was sent to gaol for one month, where she would be in safe custody, and have the benefit of medical treatment.—Connor M'Mahon was yesterday given into custody, being of unsound mind, and having attempted to commit suicide by cutting his throat with a razor, which was wrested from his hand ere the wound was more than skin deep, when he drew a knife from his pocket and was scarce restrained from effecting his purpose. He was committed to gaol for one month, in default of security to keep the peace towards himself as well as all others.

Abuse of the Vagrant Act.—Mr. Lewis Gordon yesterday appeared before the Police Magistrate and Mr. Chambers, at the central Police Office, at the instance of Mr. Joseph Creagh, who complained that at a "public place," the Bon Accord Wharf, the defendant made use of insulting language towards him, calling him a d—d blackguard," with intent to induce him to commit a breach of the peace. It appeared that a few days since defendant went to the complainant's office on business, that they disagreed on the terms, and incivilities were exchanged. Defendant admitted that in reply to an insinuation of roguery by complainant he did make use of the word blackguard, but denied having used the prefix alleged. Their worships expressed their surprise that such a case should be brought into a court of justice. They viewed Mr. Gordon's language as merely retaliative upon a previous expression of opinion by Mr. Creagh, and that he had no intention of provoking Mr. Creagh to commit a breach of the peace. The complaint was therefore dismissed.

Assault.—John M'Guinness was yesterday charged with having been drunk and disorderly in Market-street, using obscene language, and committing an assault upon Inspector Singleton, in the execution of his duty; and was ordered to pay a penalty of 20s.. with 2s. 6d. costs.

Obstruction.—Mr. N. Payten, of Castlereagh-street, yesterday pleaded guilty to an information under the Police Act, for allowing an omnibus to stand in the street, causing thereby an obstruction. He said it was very hard that he should be singled out for allowing his vehicle to stand opposite his own premises for one night, when at all hours of night and day omnibuses were to be seen standing in crowded George-street, without let or hindrance. Ordered to pay a penalty of 5s., with 5s. costs.

The Great Nugget Vein Gold Mining Company of Australia.—The Committee for allotment of shares met yesterday afternoon, for this purpose, when, after expunging all applications which had not been received according to notification, they proceeded further to reduce the lists within the reserved limits of 33,333 shares, which was effected by a further exclusion of about 4000 shares. The list being now filled, the next step will be for the shareholders to meet to approve the deed of settlement. This meeting takes place on Saturday, at two o'clock, as will be seen by our advertising columns.

Pawnbroker's Act.—On Wednesday, Casper Marks, of George-street, pawnbroker, appeared by his attorney Mr. Johnson, to answer an information filed by Mr. Francis Roberts, for a breach of the 15th clause of the Act, whereby it is enacted that every licensed pawnbroker "shall cause to be entered in a fair and legible manner, in some book kept for that purpose, a fair and reasonable description" of every article pawned with him, and "the sum of money in the whole advanced thereon, with the rate of interest to be charged on the same, and the true date at which, and the name of the party by whom, all such articles were pawned," under a penalty of any sum not exceeding £10. Mr. Cory conducted the prosecution. The first witness called was the complaining party, to whom Mr. Johnson objected as incompetent to give evidence. Mr. Dowling replied that the 32nd clause expressly enacted that "in all proceedings under this Act, the informer, or party prosecuting, shall be deemed and taken to be a competent witness." Mr. Johnson admitted that, but contended that inasmuch as the Summary Jurisdiction Act was a subsequent enactment to the Pawnbrokers' Act, the latter was thereby to that extent repealed, by the declaration that no party suing for a penalty, to any portion of which on conviction of the defendant he may be entitled, shall be permitted to give evidence in the matter. Their worships concurred in this view of the law, and the informer's evidence was refused. Mr. Cory then called Alexander Marks, son of defendant, who deposed that on the 28th April he advanced, to a person named Branscomb, the sum of £3, on the security of a watch; he did not produce the book of entry. Mr. Chambers: the book was ordered by the Bench to be impounded on last Saturday—how has it been got out of the office? - Mr. Cory: I can't say, your worship.—Mr Johnson: The Bench had no power to detain the books, but if they had, the inquiry as to how he regained possession is quite irrelevant to this case. He had the book in his possession, but it would not be produced. Mr. Cory called on Constable Carroll to prove service of summons on defendant, requiring him also to produce his book. Mr. Johnson called their worships' attention to the document which his friend on the other side wished to make out was a notice to Marks to produce his book. If it meant anything at all, it was a requisition to Mr. Chief Inspector Wearin for the production of the book. Mr. Dowling was of opinion that defendant had not been properly called upon to produce his book. Alexander Marks recalled by Mr. Cory: A book is kept for the purpose of entering the particulars of every transaction, and the entries were made sometimes by his father and sometimes by himself; the entry on the 28th April in regard to Branscomb's watch was made by himself. By Mr. Chambers: The book was produced in Court a few days ago; it was ordered by the Bench to be impounded; it is now in Court, but he did not produce it; he would not; it was in Mr. Johnson's hands Mr. Johnson interrupted this line of cross-examination by intimating that it was a very unfortunate circumstance for his client that one of their Worships, upon whom he could not reply, should be associated with his friend on the other side in the prosecution of this information. He would, however, candidly admit that he, as the defendant's attorney, had possession of the book in question, and that it would not be produced until it be shown that a proper notice for its production had been served upon the defendant. Mr. Cory asked their Worships to postpone the case, that another notice might be served. Mr. Johnson objected to any postponement of the case, but above all for the express purpose of allowing the informer to patch up his case, which it was his duty to come with every necessary proof. Such a proceeding would be utterly unprecedented in any British Court of justice, and he put it to the bench whether, in face of their oath not to deny nor to delay justice, they could consistently pursue this course, defendant standing before them for deliverance. He trusted this information would not be taken by piecemeal, nor tried by instalments, merely because the prosecutor had not taken the trouble properly to prepare his case. Mr. Dowling said that under the 26th section of the Act they had power to adjourn any case for the production of books, which course they would follow in this. Yesterday the case was accordingly again called on, but Mr. Cory was not in position to prove service of notice to produce, and the information was dismissed.

Bar Wit.—On the Judges announcing, the other day, that the ensuing Criminal Sittings would not take place at Darlinghurst, on account of the dangerous state of the ceiling, Mr. Broadhurst suggested that their Honors nevertheless ought to sit there; — on the maxim "Fiat Justitia, ruat Cœlum" — which he inferred meant ceiling in this colony.

The Blackdown Estate.—This splendid estate has recently changed hands, the consideration, we are informed, being something like £7000. For this sum the purchaser, Mr. Rotton obtains 1500 acres of land, with house, barn, mill, and other improvements, for the whole of which, let off in portions, a rental of some £800 can be realised. It is said that as much as £16 to £20 per acre has been offered to the late proprietor for portions of the flat convenient to the river, and refused. Including 500 acres lately purchased by Mr. Suttor, at £4 an acre, Mr. Rodd nets about £9000 for the whole estate. Few properties in the neighbourhood of Bathurst can compare with Blackdown in fertility or pecuniary value. —Bathurst Free Press.

Immigration to Moreton Bay. — During the last three days the hiring of the immigrants (by the Maria Somes) has gone briskly forward, and many of them, both married and unmarried, have been engaged. Up to yesterday evening it was estimated that about two-thirds of them had been hired. The terms of course vary according to circumstances, but the following, as near as we can ascertain, have been the wages given. Young girls, as house servants £15 to £18; unmarried men £26 to £28; married couples from £35 to £40 per annum, with the usual rations. —Moreton Bay Courier.

We are requested to remind intending purchasers that Mr. George A. Lloyd sells, at the City Mart, this day, at 11 o'clock, the fine fast-sailing brig Margaret, two superior chronometers, also a variety of goods, as per advertisement.

NEWS FROM THE INTERIOR.

SHOALHAVEN.

Presbyterian Ministry.—A public meeting of the congregation and supporters of the Rev. Mr. Garven, convened this day, July 12th, instant, was held at Numba, Shoalhaven, for the purpose of adopting some decided measure, and determine the question, relative to the delay of the Synod of Australia, in ordaining him as their stated minister, notwithstanding the unanimous call of the congregation, and a distinct understanding conveyed to that gentleman, from members of the Synod to that effect. The meeting was opened by prayer - and a Chairman (Mr. Innes) being appointed, the proceedings began by Mr. Garven reading several letters of correspondence passed between the Synod and himself relating to the subject of his ordination, in which correspondence, statements were made of so conflicting a nature, and the causes of delay put forth by the Moderator and other members of, the Synod, deemed of so frivolous and indefinite a character, that the meeting unanimously resolved to leave, conjointly with Mr. Garven, and at once declare themselves as independent of, and no longer members of, the Church in connection with the Synod of Australia. Mr. Thomas then proposed the following motion, seconded by Mr. Miller: - "That from the contumelious manner in which their call and sacred interests have been treated by the Synod of Australia, The Rev. Mr. Garven and the whole body of his congregation place themselves under the Synod of the Free Church." Mr. Lamond proposed as an amendment, seconded by Mr. M'Kinnon: — "That a deputation be appointed from the members, as a last appeal to the Synod of Australia, in order to obtain a final decision from them previous to joining the Free Church." The motion on a division was adopted by the majority, and thus a total disruption from the Synod of Australia was carried. The meeting then resolved to make immediate overtures to the Free Church, and appointed a deputation of four; viz., Messrs. Thomas, Adams, M'Kinnon, and Innes, to meet the Reverends Messrs. M'Intyre and Mackay on the following day, these gentlemen being in the district. Having since learned the result, it may be stated, that the deputation was favourably received, and after some consultation, the whole matter was referred to the consideration of the Free Church Synod in Sydney. In concluding this subject (as time pressed) it is hardly necessary to state, yet it ought to be remembered, that the difference between the two sections of Presbyterians is merely one of principle and not of doctrine, and in the humble opinion of the writer, neither party want strong arguments for the measure it may be disposed to adopt, judging from the intelligence of the community.

There was a meeting of the Free Church people held a few days ago, in order to raise funds for bringing out, and settling six additional clergymen in the colonial sphere of New South Wales. We cannot at present enter into the interesting proceedings, suffice it to say, that the people came forward with heart and hand in the cause, and ere the close upwards of £80 was subscribed. The meeting was ably addressed by the Rev. Mr. M'Intyre, from Maitland, and the Rev. Mr. Mackay.

In perusing your columns of late, we perceive dreadful accounts of the floods in various parts of the colony, and though we at Shoalhaven and Broughton Creek did not escape scathless, yet there is much cause to be thankful, in comparison with other localities, that we experienced less of its dire effects; many of the settlers were completely flooded out, and had their families removed in haste, consequently a great deal of produce was lost or damaged, not however to the extent that was anticipated during the flood. The weather since, and now, is all we could wish, and farming operations steadily progressing. The only drawback to the prosperity of the settlers here, is the want of a speedy and regular communication with the Sydney markets (some of the coasters were upwards of two months last trip, the distance only 120 miles). It is anticipated that something to remedy this evil will shortly be set a foot, as a few of our more energetic settlers have been laying their heads together, to accomplish the formation of (not a blockade, but) a Steam Company, to be called the Shoalhaven Steam Navigation Company; and to procure from the Clyde, a steamer of sufficient power, capacity, and light draft, suitable for the navigation of the Shoalhaven River and Sydney trade; this is a project that will take place, and must eventually succeed, though many difficulties at present exist as to its near accomplishment - the Prospectus when it appears will inform us more fully on the subject - the probable capital and amount of shares requisite. Let us hope, therefore, that the settlers will not only lay their heads, but put their hands to forward the important scheme, now that the subject is in agitation; for they surely will reap the benefit of its success; and no doubt the Representatives of Camden and St. Vincent will bring the subject of the survey of the Shoalhaven River before the attention of the Government, in order to advance the interests, and further the development of the extensive interior resources which this part of the noble colony possesses.

ORIGINAL CORRESPONDENCE.

THE NEW TARIF.

To the Editors of the Sydney Morning Herald.

Gentlemen,—The only inconsistency which exists in the New Tarif, appears to be in that of English Gin. Whence arises the down which the Colonial Secretary appears to have against that comparatively harmless spirit?

Gin drinking has hitherto been considered decidedly plebeian, horridly vulgar, and especially patronised by washerwomen; but the Colonial Secretary alleges as his excuse for a high duty, that it is drank only by the "higher classes"!

How stands the New Tarif as passed last night? —

Brandy, 6s.

Gin (English as well as foreign), 6s.

Rum, and all other spirits, including English and Irish Whiskey, 4s.

Now by what rule is English Gin selected for the highest duty, when it is well known that, considering its prime cost as compared with Dutch or Schiedam Gin, such a duty is tantamount to a prohibitory one? Under the old tarif the English manufacturer justly complained of the anomaly of having a high rate of duty on English gin, and the low one on Irish and Scotch whiskey.

Why should Scotchmen and Irishmen drink their national spirit, whiskey, under a 4s. duty, while Englishmen are compelled to drink their national spirit, gin, under a 6s. duty.

Why this distinction without a difference, except to prove to the mother country that the only deviation from the principle of what is professedly a free trade tarif, is in a case affecting the English manufacturer of gin, against whom the door is shut which we open to Irish and Scotch manufacturers of "mountain dew."

I am,
Your obedient servant,
MERCATOR.

THE NEW TARIF.

To the Editors of the Sydney Morning Herald.

Gentlemen,—I live in the bush, but I sometimes read your paper. I read the speeches of our great legislators about Free Trade, and everything and anything else. In the three-yard speech of Mr. Martin, I did not observe that he seized one fact in favour of his own views, namely, that a little protection on our infant manufactures would raise the price of wages to the mechanic and labourer, and hence it would become the means of inviting here hundreds of the best artisans from other countries at their own cost, to take advantage of these high wages. This would tend to augment our population free from our cost, and be one step towards throwing Protection aside altogether. They understand this sort of thing in a country called America.

That quaint and quaker-like gentleman, the new member for New England, must indeed be a Newcome when he fixed on the Emperor of Russia as his oracle for political economy, and for Free Trade too. "He defied the Emperor of Russia himself to make a better tarif." No wonder the Colonial Secretary praised him after this. I used to hear when I was a boy that this Emperor, and his father before him, did all they could in the protection line, and nothing for Free Trade.

I am, Gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
BUSHMAN.

RATS.

To the Editors of the Sydney Morning Herald.

Gentlemen,—Will you allow me to ask, if among your numerous contributors, and still more numerous readers, any ingenious one will be kind enough to suggest any practical method for the extirpation of the domestic rat, for such as are too cunning to be captured by the common traps or contrivances, and are also too wary to take poison (i.e. arsenic) in the ordinary forms; where in fact they are incorrigible, and all common-place attempts to suppress them have failed! I may add that I reside in the neighbourood of the shipping, where of course the evil is the greater. Any hints or suggestions, or the results of any experiments, will very much oblige,

Gentlemen, yours, &c.,
DOMO.

ENGLISH EXTRACTS.

THE TIMES ON AUSTRALIA.

(From the Globe, April 12.)

While the opinions of the Times on subjects of colonial government have in general been such as to command the full assent of most persons qualified to judge on the subject, and the serious attention of all, we cannot but observe with regret the occasional intrusion of articles conceived in the most approved style of colonial grievance-mongering, such as one to which we propose to devote a few words, which appeared on Friday last, on the subject of the Australian Constitutions.

The peculiar characteristic of the style in question is—to speak plainly about it—the most singular distortion of actual facts, which are capable of the easiest proof, but as to which the grievance monger confidently relies on the general ignorance of his readers.

Of the two monster grievances to which the writer directs attention, the first is the "Schedules"—that is, the Civil List reserved in those Constitutions. Parliament says he, by these schedules, "takes the money of the colonists, and spends it in what manner it pleases. Parliament will not impose a tax on the Australians, but in the single colony of New South Wales it appropriates no less a sum than £91,500 for services and salaries about which they have never been consulted. The Customs' department, public worship, the administration of justice, and the salaries of the secretary, treasurer, and auditor-general of the government, are all withdrawn from the consideration of the hybrid Legislature of the colony."

Quite enough to justify rebellion, thinks the reader; and marvels at the tyranny which may be practised under cover of "free institutions." Happily he may reassure himself. The whole is a vigorous effort of imagination. Not a farthing is taken, or spent, by Parliament, or withdrawn by "the schedules" from "the consideration of the Colonial Legislature," with one single exception — the salaries of the existing Judges of the Supreme Court. The remaining effect of "the schedules" is simply this: They make it part of the constitution that provision for certain services (amounting at present in New South Wales to £75,000 per annum, not £91,500) shall be made, as similar provision is made in this country, by permanent Acts, not by annual estimate; and that, as to so much of this provision as concerns the salary of the Governor, and religious purposes, no such Act can come into force until it has had the royal assent. This is the entire amount of the restrictions imposed on the Legislature, which constitute the monster grievance thus paraded! And yet our answer is drawn from no more distant source than the Act itself, section eighteen; but every one reads the Times, and no one will take the trouble to look at the "Act for the better government of the Australian colonies," which it misquotes.

The second tremendous grievance of the Australian colonists is the Waste Land Act. Here we are the less inclined to any conflict with our grievance-monger, inasmuch as we have always opposed the famous "Wakefield theory" in which that Act originated; and believing the parent to be something of an impostor, we have no particular affection for the child. But even here, with comparatively a plausible case, the writer spoils it by the same tendency to enormous exaggeration which belongs to his class. What is the use of saying that the territorial revenues of the colony are appropriated by three Lords of the Treasury," when it is notorious to everybody that the Treasury is compelled to apply one-half of those revenues to the purpose of emigration? Such statements, having a certain meagre amount of truth in the letter, but wholly unfounded in spirit and substance, are quite unworthy of the defender of a serious cause

For that it is a serious cause we readily admit; but it is important not to misunderstand it, or be misled, by declamation about the unjust interference of the mother country, from the real issue. The claim of the Australian Legislatures is, that the colonial land, and its revenues, belong to them. Let the Englishman consider what this means. It means that the few thousands or hundreds of thousands, who inhabit comparatively small portions of that vast continent, may, through their representatives, deal with the whole of unoccupied land within their geographical boundaries as they please - to the exclusion of all the interest of the mother country in its use, and the jealous restriction of the mother country from all share in its management. Thus stated, the claim seems monstrous: yet, as propounded by the writer in the Times, it is this or nothing. The Land Sales Act is founded on the opposite principle; namely, that these lands, the future homes of vast swarms to issue from the Imperial hive, belong to the empire, and are properly administered by the Imperial government, although that government cannot devote one farthing of the proceeds to any other than colonial purposes.

For our own parts, we are not fond of discussions of principles on such matters, and believe the real question to be, what authority is most likely to administer these vast treasures for the general interest of all a question far too simple and practical for the rhetoric of the grievance-monger. Nor do we think that Englishmen are likely to be moved from this plain view of the case, by reiterated threats about the determination of the Colonial Legislatures to enforce their supposed rights. If it were true, as the writer asserts, that the legislators of New South Wales are determined to use the present difficulties of the community, in consequence of the discovery of gold, as a means of extorting their claims by refusing to vote money to keep the peace that they are "pleased to see government distressed by the inadequacy of the sums it has appropriated" to the purpose of guarding their constituents' gold, and protecting their constituents' lives and properties from Lynch law, and no law, we are afraid a good many would find in this circumstance arguments rather against than in favour of "the principle of self-government." But we hold this to be as great an exaggeration as the rest. The Legislature will no doubt lose no opportunity of urging their own views of the question. But they are not likely to injure the people whom they represent, by deducing from those views practical corollaries so full of mischief.

THE CAFFRE WAR AND THE CAPE COLONY.

The vote of £460,000 towards the expenses of the Caffre war, proposed in Committee of Supply, led to a debate opened by Sir William Molesworth.

Sir William went thoroughly into the whole question of our expenditure on account of South Africa; to show, first, the enormous increase and amount of that expenditure; and secondly, that it is due to the abolition of the old and cheap system of self-protection by the colonists themselves. Our force was 4500 in 1816, and from that year down to 1833 it diminished yearly under the old system till it was but 2000 men. In that year our expenditure was £100,000. But the old system was then discontinued, and the colonists were prevented from using the Commando mode of defence, and the expense increased so that the average cost of the three years of peace ending in 1846 was £280,000; and it is about £1,000,000 a year. In fact, our peace and our war expenditure have both increased fourfold, and our last peace expenditure exceeded our old war expenditure by about fifty per cent. This is the result of entering into "diplomatic relations" with chiefs whom Sandilli himself describes as "irreclaimable thieves." Under the old system, when men defended themselves, minor wrongs were overlooked; now, when Government is answerable, every lost goat is said to be stolen by the Caffres, and its recovery is expected, as a duty to be performed with the whole power of the nation. The average cost of the horses and cattle lost yearly (about £6000) would be paid by the interest of one-fifth of the cost of a year of Caffre war. Diverging from the immediate subject to touch on the causes and conduct of the present war, Sir William expressed his belief that Sir Harry Smith should for civil reasons, have been recalled long ago; but on the military question, speaking diffidently, he saw no difference between the present tactics of Sir Harry and those by which in former Caffre wars he gained great renown. Referring to the opinion of the Duke of Wellington, that roads should be opened and the fastnesses be destroyed, he showed, from the peculiar natural features of the ground, and the remarkable character of the African "bush," both unlike those of any other part of the globe, that this would be impracticable. Recurring to the main theme, he said he saw no hope of more moderate costs but in giving back to the colonists the power of self-defence; and giving to them the freest institutions, and the complete control over their local affairs.

Mr. Gladstone supported the same views. Referring to the experience of our North American colonies, and their success in managing their own frontier relations with the savage and powerful tribes among which they were at first thrown, he said that he was not so visionary as to imagine we could do away with the military establishments on the frontier; but he wanted to see the centre of authority carried back to the place from which it ought never to have been removed, and to see the frontier question made a colonial question.

Lord John Russell "saw difficulties." The case of the colonies did not go altogether the way assumed, nor that of the American States. As to the first, many of the first bodies of colonists were massacred; would that result be satisfactory? As to the second, the Central Government of America does not leave the frontier questions to the States; the last year's expense of repelling savages was £700,000 more to the central authority than in the preceding year. Lord John would neither leave the colonists to be butchered, nor would he enormously extend our frontier, but pursue a "middle course." He concluded his speech by a compliment to Sir Andries Stockenstrom, and a word in favour of Sir Harry Smith's untarnished military reputation.

Sir John Pakington echoed the praises of Sir Harry Smith's military services; but observed that it was by him chiefly that the policy of annexation and enormously extending our frontier, already too wide, was practised. The last course of policy in regard to the Orange River Sovereignty, Earl Grey had renounced, and the despatch should have been received by Sir Harry Smith about the same time that he got the recommendations of the Commissioners for organizing a British Government in the territory so abandoned.

Mr. Roebuck observed, that the real difficulty is of an Exeter Hall character; if you let the colonists defend themselves, they gradually exterminate the aborigines.

Mr. Adderley said, that the future peace of the colony would much depend on the next despatch sent out by the present Colonial Secretary. He expressed confidence in Sir John Pakington, and in the ability which he has already shown in his department. He was convinced that the first despatch of Sir John would give satisfaction to the colonists, as it had given satisfaction to those individuals in London who are interested in the colony; and would lead them to hope for the panacea of all the evils of the colony, the bona fide carrying out of the promised constitution.

Mr. Frederick Peel said, that whenever Mr. Adderley should choose to bring on his abandoned motion against Earl Grey, he will be "ready to vindicate" Lord Grey's policy," and especially with regard to the despatch which was made the principal ground of accusation."

Mr. Henry Drummond said, that the abandonment of Mr. Adderley's motion was another proof to him that there was no subject of public interest or private justice which is not interfered with by factious or party motives. He described Earl Grey's despatch as a "shameful despatch;" and said he believed that if Sir Harry Smith had been a Lord of the Bedchamber, or a relation of a Cabinet Minister, that despatch would never have been written.

Lord John Russell rose to this taunt. He justified the despatch; it expressed the unanimous opinion of the Cabinet. As to the insinuation, now repeated, which referred to Lord Torrington, it is true that Lord Torrington is a distant relation of Lord John Russell, but he did not owe his appointment to that; Lord John in fact suggested three or four other persons, to all of whom Earl Grey offered the appointment, and they refused it; and when at last Lord Torrington was suggested to Earl Grey, the suggestion did not originate with Lord John. In fact, all that Lord Torrington gained by relationship to him was the ordeal of a most unfair and unjust treatment.

The Crystal Palace.—The promenade in the Crystal Palace on Saturday afternoon was quite a monster demonstration. The estimate of the number of visitors ranges from 40,000 to 70,000; some 2000 carriages thronged the approaches. Of course the seven military bands, stationed in different parts of the building, and the giant organ of Messrs. Willis, which remains to this time, did their best to please. The national anthem, played by all the bands combined in the centre of the transept as a finale at five o'clock, went with a voluminous unity and grandeur spoken of as "sublime." No doubt, Messrs. Fox and Henderson would be glad to renew more than once the beautiful and very profitable scene; but it seems that even the gathering of Saturday last took place under an official prohibition. At the time the public were enjoying themselves, Messrs. Fox and Henderson held in their hands a double protest in the shape of a note from the Royal Commission, enclosing this announcement from Lord John Manners as head of the Office of Works — "Lord John Manners feels it to be his duty to take the earliest opportunity of apprizing the Commissioners for the Exhibition, that he cannot in any way countenance the appropriation of the building to any purposes other than those which are specified in the royal warrant of the 20th of September." —Spectator, April 10.

Cardinal Mezzofanti.—At a recent meeting of the Philological Society, T. Watts, Esq., read a paper on Cardinal Mezzofanti, whom he described as being the greatest linguist that ever existed. He certainly was one of the most wonderful curiosities of the Eternal City. During the later years of his life a sight of the highest interest was annually to be witnessed at Rome. At the examination of the pupils of the college of the Propaganda, it is customary for each of the young missionaries of various countries to deliver an oration in his own language. At these meetings Mezzofanti used to attend and converse with almost all the scholars,—"passing with equal fluency from the dialects of the extreme West to those of the extreme East,—from Irish, which he spoke with ease, to Chinese, of which he was peculiarly fond." Byron said of him "he is a walking Polyglott, and ought to have existed at the time of the Tower of Babel as universal interpreter. I tried him in all tongues of which I knew a single oath, and, egad! he astounded me—even to my English." There is one omission, however, it does not seem that even this miraculous Polyglottist could speak Welsh.

Louis Napoleon.—Last week, President Bonaparte told the French people that he would not seek to be made Emperor unless the "enemies of order" compelled him to assume the dignity in self-defence. Rumours circulated this week in his own journals, of attempt to reorganise the secret societies, and an expectation of new arrests pervading Paris, have excited suspicions that he is preparing to be forced to crown himself. It may be asked, would he be more absolute as Emperor than he is as President? Perhaps not: but he would convert a ten years' lease into a life-tenure; would establish a dynasty, with the right of heriditary succession; might aid by marriage his recognition as one of the corporation of European sovereigns: might perhaps, were the Great Powers of Europe to evince disinclination to his aggrandisement, arouse the torpid nationality of Frenchmen in his favour. Meanwhile, the President or Emperor, or whatever he is or is to be, having attired the legislators of France in suitable liveries, is devising uniforms for the subordinate functionaries of government; and having received the oaths of fidelity of the senate and legislative body, has issued a decree to regulate the manner in which all other functionaries, down to gardes champêtres and auctioneers, shall take theirs. Strange, that a man who set so little store by his own oath to maintain the late constitution should expect anything from the oaths of others to maintain his power. —Spectator, April 10.
